Under the direction of Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Draper, the Newspaper Club prepares the Auriga—school paper containing school news, editorials, and student literary efforts. This year's group has been interested in improving the quality of the paper's content and in publishing more frequently than before—which has been effected by utilizing the mimeograph process. PICTURE ABOVE—Mrs. Chapman, S. Advised by Mr. Davis, the Yearbook Club has stressed coverage, copy accuracy, and coordination in preparing the 1968 Aurigan. The yearbook's advertising solicitation campaign—directed by Manfred Liebsch—was early, fast moving, and very successful. Jessie Newton and Bob Marion effected more sales of the Aurigan (251) than the sales campaign of any previous year. Coordinator Barbara Coons effectively handled the critical task of plotting deadlines and allotting time for yearbook work units. Kat Anderson—executive editor—has contributed a record number of student photographs (over 100) for the 1968 Aurigan. Art Editor Linda Warren has introduced art rendered advertisements stressing design (see pages 21 through 27), and Editor in Chief Barbara Martin increased the number of pages in the yearbook from 88 to 96—the first increase in many years—without increasing the price $3.75 of the book. PICTURE AT LEFT: First Row: M. The Concert Band provides music for assemblies, concerts, graduation, and football and basketball games. Guided by the majorettes, the Marching Band renders the traditional hymns and marches on Memorial Day, and in March it provides a half-time show at the Western Massachusetts Small Schools Basketball Tournament. The Stage Band, a selected group of advanced musicians, plays popular music ranging from Herb Alpert's themes to "Batman." All music activities are guided by Mr. Wartella. Throughout the year he conducts sectional rehearsals and expends much-appreciated effort working with individuals to improve their techniques.

Editor's Epilogue

In October, 1966, the 1968 Aurigan project was offered to and accepted by members of the Class of 1968. Upon being elected editor-in-chief by those members, I had a dim conception of what the project would entail. Since then the conception has been gradually illuminated; some of the illumination has involved

- serving an editor-in-chief apprenticeship on the 1967 Aurigan project
- appointing staff members for the 1968 Aurigan
- establishing the duties and responsibilities of staff members
- providing instructions and training for staff members
- scheduling yearbook work-sessions and meetings
- planning agenda for yearbook meetings
- planning assignments for yearbook work-sessions
- maintaining meeting and work-session attendance record
- planning the yearbook unit
- establishing yearbook specifications for printing and photography contracts
- selecting a printing company
- selecting a school photographer
- coordinating staff work with the yearbook unit plan
- keeping a calendar of past events
- keeping a future's calendar
- planning and assigning deadlines
- assigning work units
- overviewing work being done
- checking the progress of assigned work
- directing the charting of yearbook progress
- learning the mechanics and principles of photography
- anticipating yearbook unit and photographic needs
- planning coverage of school events
- planning group pictures

These responsibilities and chores were handled with the cooperation and contributions of (1) an excellent yearbook staff and group, (2) members of the administration—especially Mr. Trocchi and Mr. Shiminski—who were instrumental in arranging times, places, and groups for meetings and photography, (3) the faculty members who permitted student photographers to enter classes, expended time and effort complying with yearbook photography schedules, and—as club advisers or group directors—provided needed information about their clubs or groups, (4) the office secretaries who were extremely helpful and patient, and (5) the businesses and individuals who agreed to advertise in the 1968 Aurigan.

YEARBOOK CONTRIBUTION CREDITS

(The following contributions summary is essentially correct with these qualifications: (1) Yearbook contributions rejected by quality controls received only partial credit—and in some cases none. The last contributors of previously rejected yearbook material received partial or total credit for the work. (2) A few staff positions involved duties that could not be credited objectively. Credit adjustments have been made in such cases in an attempt to provide adequate recognition where it is due. These adjustments are indicated by single asterisks* (credits increased by 50) and double asterisks (credits increased by 100).)
